DND pushes $13M Italian plane deal

The Department of National Defence (DND) is pushing forward a $13 million deal to purchase 10 Italian aircraft, a move that has sparked controversy among some members of the House of Commons. The deal, which was announced last week, is part of a larger effort to modernize the Canadian military's fleet of fighter jets. The aircraft in question are the Eurofighter Typhoon, a multi-role fighter that is capable of both air-to-air and air-to-ground missions. The deal is being pushed by the DND, which is led by Minister of National Defence, the Hon. Peter MacKay. However, some members of the House of Commons, including the opposition, have expressed concerns about the deal. They argue that the deal is too expensive and that the aircraft are not the best choice for Canada's needs. The deal is also being criticized for its lack of transparency. Some members of the House of Commons have accused the DND of not providing enough information about the deal to the public. The deal is expected to be finalized in the coming months.

A group of people, likely politicians or officials, are gathered around a table, possibly in a meeting or press conference setting. They appear to be engaged in a discussion or looking at documents on the table.

Comelec stumped by ads showing several bets

By Liza E. Johnson

MANILA, Sept. 10 (AP) — The Commission on Elections (Comelec) is stumped by a series of television advertisements that show several bets, including one for a presidential election, and are trying to determine if they are illegal.

The ads, which are being aired by several networks, show a man in a suit and tie, who appears to be a high-ranking official, making bets on various outcomes, including the results of the 2010 presidential election. The bets are made in a casual, almost off-the-cuff manner, and the man is seen smiling and laughing as he makes them.

Comelec officials are concerned that the ads may be an attempt to influence the outcome of the election, and they are trying to determine if they are illegal under the Philippine Election Code. The code prohibits any person from making bets on the outcome of an election, and it also prohibits any person from using any means to influence the outcome of an election.

The ads are being aired by several networks, including ABS-CBN, GMA, and TV5. They are being aired during the evening news program, and they are being repeated several times throughout the week.

Comelec officials are trying to determine if the ads are illegal, and they are trying to determine if they are being aired by any of the networks. They are also trying to determine if the ads are being funded by any of the candidates for the 2010 presidential election.

Name it, election paraphernalia have it

Never has political paraphernalia been this varied and cool—from napkins to mobile phones, t-shirts to banners, golf bags and even alcohol.

By Christine P. Pineda
Whether it's a campaign for a local office or a national election, candidates are looking for ways to get their name out there. And one of the most effective ways to do that is through election paraphernalia.
